The Bowtie Debate

Pro

1. It is considered to be appropriate business formal dress by fashion industry professionals. Note current Commissioner of Education Michael Williams at the Texas FFA Convention.

2. It originated in Texas. Alvin FFA member Andrew Stanton possesses the first bowtie ever made by FFA, because it was his idea. Texas FFA owns the second bowtie produced.
3. While it is not recognized as official dress by the National FFA Organization, states have adopted variations from the national standards. Texas allows boots. California refuses to adopt the black nylon hoses and opts, instead, for nude nylons.

Con

1. It is not recognized by the National FFA Organization as official dress. The official dress standards online are silent on the issue, but the FFA catalogue states that the bowtie is not official dress.
2. Requiring all members to wear the same tie promote uniformity and unity.
3. A 2012 student committee of area officers suggested that Texas should follow national standards in regard to the bowtie.
